Staying true to his accountant roots, Newport Beach Rep. John Campbell this week announced a new venue to talk about federal budget and spending issues: the Green Eye Shade blog. It's a featured blog on Townhall.com, a conservative website that also carries blogs written by right-leaning radio co... Staying true to his accountant roots, Newport Beach Rep. John Campbell this week announced a new venue to talk about federal budget and spending issues: the Green Eye Shade blog.

It's a featured blog on Townhall.com, a conservative website that also carries blogs written by right-leaning radio commentators Hugh Hewitt and Michael Medved.

"If you think federal taxes are too high and the government spends too much of your money, then you will be interested in the Green Eyeshade," Campbell said in a statement. "Every day there is a lot going on in Congress that gets missed by the mainstream media."

Campbell's background before he became a legislator was in accounting, and he's been on the vanguard of first state and now federal efforts to rein in government spending. His new blog can be found at http://greeneyeshade.townhall.com/blog .