Committee Assignments:

▣ House Committee on Financial Services

As a member of the House Committee on Financial Services, Congressman Campbell oversees the entire financial services industry. This includes industry areas such as securities, insurance, housing, and banking. The committee also has an oversight function over the United States Department of Treasury, United States Federal Reserve, and the United States Security and Exchange Commission.

▣ House Committee on the Budget

The House Committee on the Budget is one of the House of Representative's standing committees. In this capacity, the committee is responsible for Congressional oversight of the federal budgetary process. The primary function of the committee is the drafting and preparation of the Concurrent Resolution on the Budget.

▣ Joint Economic Committee

The Joint Economic Committee is a bicameral committee created by Congress through the Employment Act of 1946. Under this Act, Congress established two advisory panels: the President's Council of Economic Advisers (CEA) and the Joint Economic Committee. Their primary tasks are to review economic conditions and to recommend improvements in economic policy. Ten members from House of Representatives and ten members from the Senate make up the Joint Economic Committee, and all 20 are tasked with holding hearings, performing research and advising Congress on matters related to the U.S. economy.
