(Congressman Campbell Interviewed by POLITICO's Erika Lovley)

"The Democrats aren't passing a budget because it would expose that their rhetoric won't result in a reduction in the deficit. They say that, but if they produced a budget, they'd have to show numbers and the numbers don't add up. If they want to reduce the deficit and continue the spending want, they'll have to tax everybody and tax a lot.

I think the voters are beginning to pick up on this. You're starting to see people that saying, 'What's their budget proposal?' "